ADVERTISEMENT

Report: Former Goodyear officer searched plate of crime victim 36 times

Internal affairs report says Kristopher Jackson used Flock system after a call for service to look up victim’s license plate dozens of times

Internal affairs found a Goodyear officer searched a victim's plate in Flock 36 times and turned off his body camera on a call. He resigned before it finished.

By Zach Prelutsky

Share

Add Us
On Google

GOODYEAR, AZ (AZFamily) — An internal affairs investigation report is shedding more light on the reason an officer resigned from the Goodyear Police Department.

Last month, Goodyear police announced that Kristopher Jackson had quit the force amid an investigation into misuse of the department's Flock camera system.

The report obtained by Arizona's Family reveals that Jackson used the system to search the license plate of a victim he met during a call for service.

"That's not right at all. Yeah, he should be penalized for that. Punished, or whatever the case may be," said Lindsay, who lives in Goodyear.

On Jan. 4, Jackson responded to a call for service from a woman who claimed her ex-boyfriend went into her home, took her cat and was threatening to send partially nude photos of her to her work.

The internal affairs report says Jackson sat with the woman, answering questions about protective orders and talking through the situation.

She told him she didn't want a report taken that day because she thought the cat might be returned, and asked if she could call him if it wasn't back by Jan. 8.

About 23 minutes into the call, Jackson can be heard clearing his throat, then reaching up and turning off his body-worn camera, according to the report.

The woman was still talking about calls and messages from her ex-boyfriend at the time. Jackson didn't clear the call until 40 minutes later, and he never wrote a report.

The report says Jackson also ran the woman's name through ACJIS, the state's criminal justice database, five times on the day of the call and once more on Jan. 10.

"The police department found not only that this officer inappropriately accessed a database and also lied during the investigation."

Thirty-six times between Jan. 4 and Feb. 8, Jackson searched the license plate belonging to the victim, including 14 times in one day. Some of those searches happened outside of Jackson's normal working hours. The report says Jackson also looked up the plate of the ex-boyfriend a few times.

The department's internal affairs unit learned of the problem in July, when an internal affairs officer ran a Flock audit that flagged Jackson's searches.

"When you access the database, it's fairly easy to be able to figure out what credentials, what username, what password was used to get into the database," said Gennaco, who also works as an independent auditor for Flock systems.

Glendale police investigated whether Jackson had illegally accessed criminal history records. No charges were filed.

In an interview with a Glendale detective, Jackson said he checked her plate so often to make sure she was safe. He said he called her and went to her home to check on her. A forensic exam of his city-issued phone found no calls between the two before Jan. 31, when she left him a voicemail saying her cat had been killed. The report also notes he gave two different reasons for running her name in ACJIS.

Jackson resigned from Goodyear police before the internal affairs investigation was complete.

In October, Goodyear police announced the internal investigation was complete. Chief Brian Issitt said that if Jackson hadn't quit, he would have been fired for multiple policy violations: abuse of authority, violation of body-worn camera policy and dishonesty.

This is not the only instance Arizona's Family has covered of law enforcement misusing automated license plate reader (ALPR) systems. In August, an Apache Junction officer resigned after misusing Flock cameras to track his wife.

The Institute for Justice has found dozens of instances of officers across the country misusing

“For somebody to use that, that way, in their own personal, whatever, is just wrong in every sense of the word,” said Lindsay.

See a spelling or grammatical error in our story? Please click here to report it.

Do you have a photo or video of a breaking news story? Send it to us here with a brief description.

Copyright 2026 KTVK/KPHO. All rights reserved.

Hackers Want You Unprotected - Do This

Webroot | Sponsored

Buy Now

Wyoming: Worst Zip Codes for Overcharging Car Insurance (Is Yours On The List?)

Car Insurance Data Shows Which Zip Codes Save The Most

OTTO Insurance | Sponsored

Learn More

Why Your Rotator Cuff Won’t Heal (What Most Doctors Miss)

Shoulder Relief News | Sponsored

Physical Therapists: Why Seniors Lose Leg Power & The Simple Fix!

Don't Miss This Simple Daily Habit That Could Make a Difference!

Creatine | Sponsored

Click Here

Persistent tinnitus linked to a habit most people over 50 share

Heart.Health | News | Sponsored

Learn More

Wrinkled Skin? Most People Use Moisturizer. Koreans Do This Instead

She stopped using her moisturizer and tried this instead. The results surprised everyone.

Beauty Guide | Sponsored

Read More

ADVERTISEMENT

Most Read

Desert Ridge QB dismissed from team over audible; 12 teammates suspended for supporting him

Brazilian university official killed by wind-blown debris while touring Taliesin West

Couple refuses to leave their dog behind in Sedona rescue

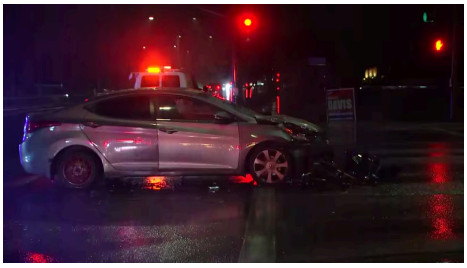

Highway near Sedona remains closed as City declares emergency for flooding impacts

⦿ Active flooding evacuations across Arizona: Here's who's impacted

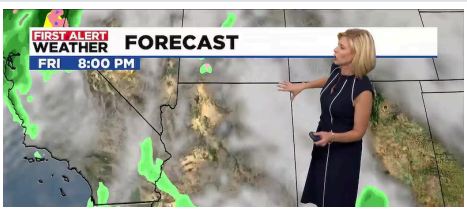

⦿ Several kids seriously injured after being hit by car in Mesa

⦿ Person found in Mexico is not missing Arizona woman, sheriff's office says

Latest News

Rain chances increase for Phoenix after sunny Veterans Day

Veterans Day 2026: Free meals, discounts and events across the Phoenix area

Actress Julianne Moore shares brain health message for Alzheimer's Awareness Month

Nation's largest property manager settles with FTC for $50 million

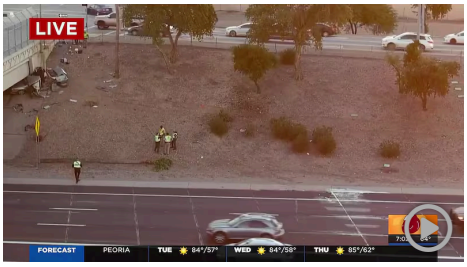

1 dead, 2 hurt after car crashes into freeway underpass in Glendale

Betting on murder trial outcomes raises questions about fair trials

Can you bet on a verdict? Inside the prediction markets tied to criminal cases

Arizona's Family
5555 N. 7th Ave
Phoenix, AZ 85013
(602) 207-3333

A Gray Local Media Station © 2002-2026