
Genzel: When it comes to misusing Flock cameras, concern is not enough

 by Special to San José Spotlight October 6, 2026

An automated license plate reader from Flock Safety. Photo courtesy of the Santa Clara County Sheriff's Office.

"I am concerned." "A breach of trust."

This is what we heard from San Jose councilmembers at the recent Rules Committee hearing on the misuse of the city's Flock li

A San Jose police officer used the department's Flock system to share a woman's location with his cousin who was accused of al

Imagine for a moment how this woman must have felt. She had done precisely what victims of domestic violence are told to do:

Of course, the individual responsible should be punished and the rules should be tightened. Yet this is not a problem with an inc

The people most vulnerable to surveillance are simply the first to feel what it enables: domestic-violence survivors (officers have

"These are just bad apples, isolated cases" we hear from Flock defenders. But time and time again, these "exceptions" follow fror

If y[ⓧ] build a tool which takes a picture to answer "Where was the suspect's car?" it's not hard to then make it answer "Where w

You cannot prevent surveillance creep through better guardrails. Mountain View learned that this year. Despite supposedly stric Stop telling us that one more layer of guardrails will make mass surveillance safe. The failure is built into the system itself.

As a member of the Safety Over Surveillance coalition, I am asking San Jose to stop subjecting its residents to mass surveillance Councilmembers are right to be concerned. The woman whose safety was compromised had considerably more than concern a Mariya Genzel is the lead of Blue Turn Indivisible, a partner in the Safety over Surveillance coalition.

[illegible]

mmMwWLiIOfiflO&1

mmMwWLiIOfiflO&1

mmMwWLliI0fiflO&1

mmMwWLlilOfiflO&1

mmMwWLliI0fiflO&1

mmMwWLiI0fiI0&1