A pair of resolutions would approve a $1.5 million funding agreement between the city and Wolff 23 LLC for the development of 23 affordable for-sale units at 4801 W. 10th Ave., in the Villa Park neighborhood.

One agreement, Council Resolution 26-0320, supports a pass-through of money from the Colorado State Affordable Housing Fund, which provides grant funds to eligible local governments for affordable homeownership opportunities. The funding can be used to build new homes, acquire and rehabilitate existing properties, or prepare sites for future development.

The second, Council Resolution 26-0321, approves a $1.7 million loan agreement between the City and County of Denver and Wolff 23 LLC to build the condominium units, which will be known as Wolff Flats.

The units will provide affordable housing to households at or below 80% area median income (AMI), and will remain affordable, secured by a covenant recorded against the property that will run for a minimum of 70 years.

Initial sale price of the units, according to city documents, will be $285,703 for a one-bedroom unit, and $328,641 for a two-bedroom unit.

City Council members have placed two proclamations on the agenda.

The first, sponsored by Councilmember Flor Alvidrez, will honor Denver Arts and Venues during Colorado Arts Education Month.

The second, sponsored by Councilmember Darrell Watson, will recognize National Public Health Week which, in Denver, runs from April 6–12 and recognizes the work of public health workers.

Bills on final consideration include Council Bill 25-0934, a $108 million

Colorado Convention Center, reimburse the city for some preliminary expenditures, and cover the associated costs of executing the deal.

Denver City Council meetings continue to be held in the Parr-Widener Community Room as renovations in the council chambers progress.

Seating is limited, and the room will fill quickly.

The Denver City Council's regular meeting begins at 3:30 p.m., with the general public comment session scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.
