To give the police department more tools to address crime, Foster City is adding an automated license plate camera program to monitor vehicles entering and leaving the city, despite concern about privacy rights.

“We are experiencing a rise in crime in Foster City as well as the county. We have limited personnel to handle a growing number of calls for service, and the police department’s commitment to providing excellent levels of service to the community necessitates the use of additional technological options to detect, solve, prevent and deter crime,” Foster City Police Chief Tracy Avelar said.
