

APRIL 8, 2026

eff.org

CLAW BACK YOUR PRIVACY

JOIN EFF

Selling Mass Surveillance | EFFector 38.7

Time and time again, we've seen police surveillance suffer from 'mission creep'—technology sold as a way to prevent heinous crimes ends up enforcing traffic violations, tracking protestors, and more. In our latest EFFector newsletter, we're diving into this troubling pattern and sharing all the latest in the fight for privacy and free speech online.

JOIN OUR NEWSLETTER

For over 35 years, EFFector has been your guide to understanding the intersection of technology, civil liberties, and the law. This week's issue covers the urgent need to reform NSA spying; a victory for internet access in the Supreme Court; and how license plate readers are normalizing mass surveillance.

Prefer to listen in? EFFector is now available on all major podcast platforms. This time, we're chatting with EFF Privacy Litigation Director Adam Schwartz about some of the recent technologies we've seen suffer from "mission creep." And don't miss the EFFector news quiz! You can find the episode and subscribe on your podcast platform of choice:

Privacy info. This embed will serve content from simplecast.com

Want to help us push back against mass surveillance? Sign up for EFF's EFFector newsletter for updates, ways to take action, and new merch drops. You can also fuel the fight for privacy and free speech online when you support EFF today!

ELECTRONIC FRONTIER FOUNDATION
eff.org
Creative Commons Attribution License