When asked about the Terafab chip manufacturing project in Grimes County, Hinojosa tied the project to her criticism of Abbott's relationship with Elon Musk, whose company SpaceX is developing Terafab.

"So there are real c[illegible]nd billionaires and not the people [illegible] said. "The data centers are a prime[illegible]here because this is first and fore[illegible]rd when we are doing any kind of e[illegible]ble."

Hinojosa said she f[illegible] District Court to release emails between him and Musk. On data centers more broadly, she called for a moratorium on any new permits until protections for water, power and local input are in place.

School funding and vouchers

On school vouchers, which Abbott championed, Hinojosa said schools are in crisis with teachers leaving and more than 150 districts moving to four-day weeks. She said she would fire TEA Commissioner Mike Morath on day one, pause the A-through-F system tied to STAAR, and reprioritize funding to teacher pay, small class sizes and special education.

On Abbott's promise to zero out school district property taxes for homestead owners, Hinojosa said she would instead end corporate giveaways to buy down property taxes.

Crime and Repeat Offender program

On public safety, Hinojosa was asked about Abbott's Texas Repeat Offender Program, a joint task force targeting Houston that Abbott said he is willing to expand to include the Brazos Valley.

Hinojosa said public safety has to be a priority and should not be partisan, adding she would evaluate models from around the state and focus on data-driven policy and coordination with local, state and federal law enforcement.

Flock cameras

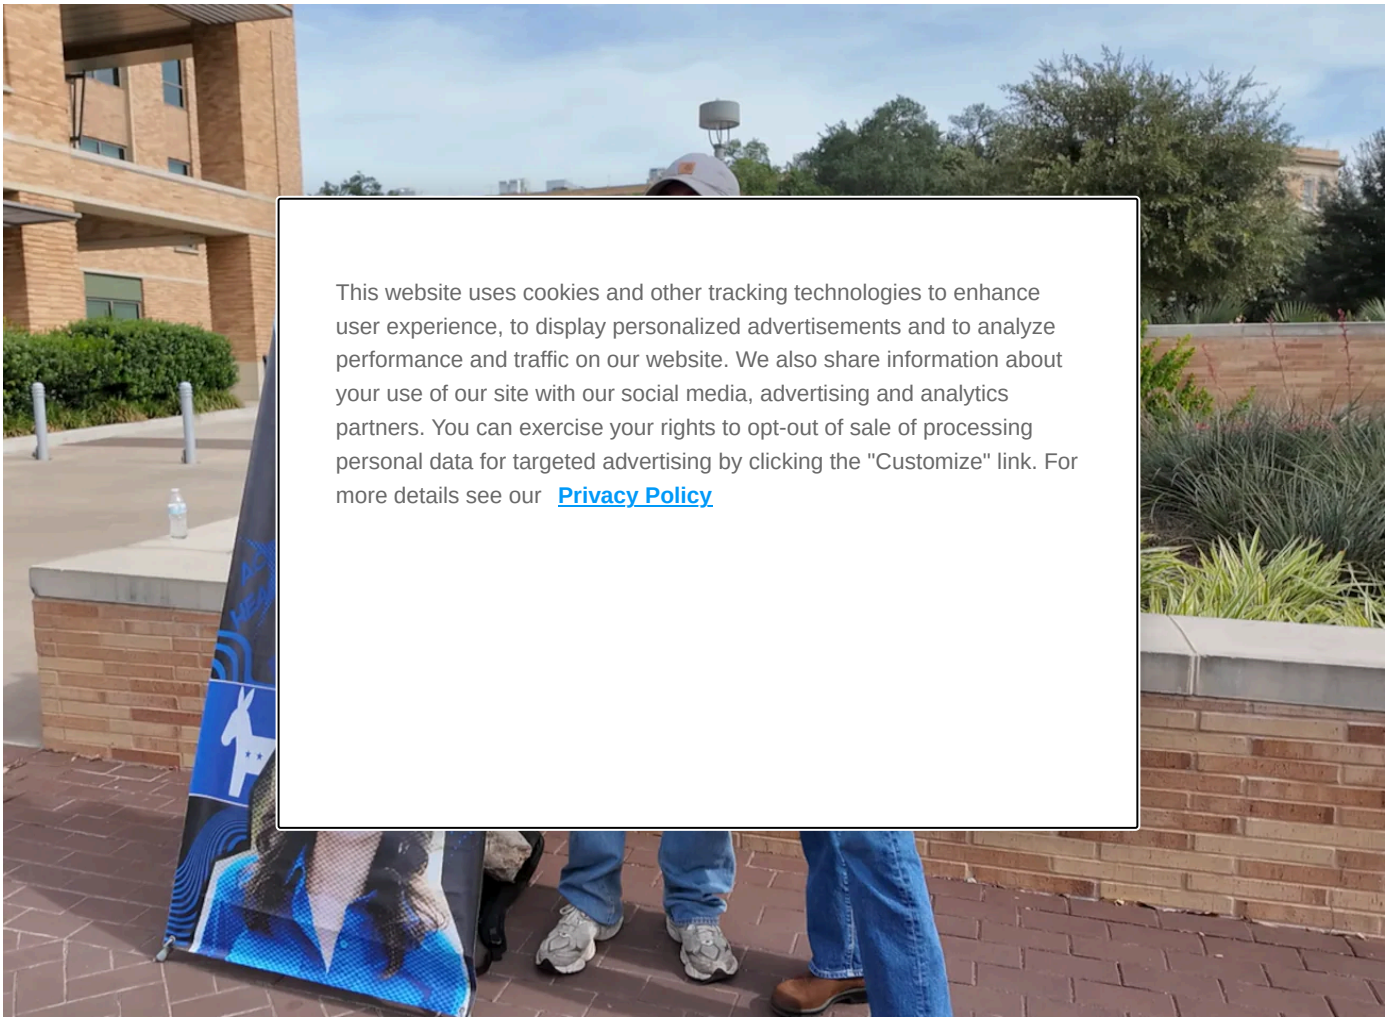

Hinojosa sharply criticized Abbott's handling of state grant funding for Flock license plate reader cameras, saying the cameras were never authorized by the Legislature.

"What would you plan for flock cameras as governor? I think that they were put up by Greg Abbott in violation of law, fr ate in Texas," Hinojosa said. "So e refunded for that. And I think the

She added there m d they have proliferated without

"There might be so roliferated across the state, m elves. Everywhere we go, akes a lot of effort to cut those down. So people are angry about it. I mean, we really believe in liberties and privacy in this state. And that is violating that."

Affordability

When asked how her affordability plan differs from Abbott's plan to slash property taxes, health and auto insurance costs, Hinojosa questioned his record after 12 years in office and pointed to her $1,500 payment proposal, suspending the gas tax, and ending corporate tax breaks.
