Millbrae council approves 23 new surveillance cameras

City officials OK 5-year contract for license plate reading cameras to aid law enforcement

Millbrae will soon get a host of new surveillance cameras, with the City Council approving a five-year contract to install 23 license plate reading devices around major transit arteries in the city.

The council has long sought implementation of the cameras, called automated license plate readers, or ALPRs, but delays related to permitting from Caltrans have slowed the process. The cameras are an increasingly popular law enforcement tool in the region, capable also of identifying things like vehicle make and model, color, bumper stickers or other distinguishers.
