BRENNHAM, Texas (KBTX) - The City of Brenham confirms it's conducting an internal affairs investigation into one of its police officers. The confirmation comes after a social media post claimed an officer was allegedly terminated following allegations they misused the department's automated license plate reader (ALPR) system.

A social media post for misusing the department's automated license plate reader (ALPR) system, and that the investigation is ongoing.

KBTX reached out to the department on the matter, but spokespersons declined to comment.

Brenham's community relations officer provided the following statement to confirm the officer's status.

This week, the Brenham Police Department (BPD) received an inquiry concerning a BPD officer, claiming that the officer had been terminated for improper conduct related to his job. The BPD can confirm that there is an internal affairs investigation being conducted involving a BPD officer. All internal investigations are conducted through a fair, impartial, and comprehensive review process in accordance with departmental policy. The current investigation is ongoing, and no determination has been made concerning the officer's status. The BPD will provide an update after the conclusion of the investigation.
