Cops Keep Getting Arrested for Using Flock to Stalk People

JASON KOEBLER • JUN 10, 2026 AT 9:22 AM

There have been more than a dozen cases around the country where police use Flock to obsessively and illegally stalk people.

For months during the summer of 2024, Jarmarus Brown, an Orange City, Florida police officer, ran his ex-girlfriend's license plate through the Flock automated license plate reader (ALPR) system lookup database at least 69 times. He searched for the license plate belonging to her mom at least 24 times, and searched for the license plate belonging to her dad at least 15 times. Brown's searches were happening so often, and were so commonplace, that even one of his colleagues noticed Brown researching his ex-girlfriend's
